Policy Statement

Introduction

Living on campus is a fundamental aspect that directly affects students' university life, as it provides a suitable environment for studying, social interaction, and personal development. The housing policy aims to organize the terms and conditions of residency to ensure a safe, healthy, and well-organized environment.

1. Objectives of the On-Campus Housing Policy

- Provide a safe and comfortable environment for students living on campus.
- Organize the housing process in a manner that ensures fairness and transparency among all students.
- Support the educational process by providing a suitable environment for study and concentration.
- Enhance social interaction and build relationships among students.
- Regulate behavior in accordance with university laws and regulations.

2. Conditions and Requirements for On-Campus Housing

- Eligibility: The student must be officially registered at the university and meet admission requirements.
- Formal application: Submit an official housing application along with all required documents such as ID card, personal photo, and university enrollment certificate.
- Priority: Some universities give priority to students from distant governorates or those with social or academic eligibility.

- Compliance: The student must agree to abide by all rules and regulations related to dormitory life.

3. Rules and Procedures for Residency

- Duration of stay: The housing period is usually set according to the semester or academic year, with the possibility of renewal based on need and circumstances.
- Fees and costs: The student is required to pay housing fees, which include accommodation, services, and maintenance.
- Behavior and discipline: Commitment to respectful behavior, avoiding activities such as smoking, unauthorized visitors, or damaging property.
- Reports and complaints: There should be a clear mechanism for submitting complaints or reporting problems within the dormitory.
- Visits: Regulation of visitor entry and exit according to specified rules, including visiting hours.

4. Facilities and Services Provided in Campus Housing

- Furnished or unfurnished rooms depending on the university.
- Internet and communication services.
- Security and surveillance 24/7.
- Maintenance and cleaning services.
- Recreational and cultural facilities such as study rooms, sports halls, and meeting rooms.

5. Positive Effects of Living on Campus

- Saving time and effort commuting between home and university.
- Building social networks and psychological support among students.
- Increasing opportunities to participate in academic and cultural activities.
- Improving academic performance due to easy access to university resources.

6. Challenges and Issues Facing Resident Students

- Feeling pressured or loss of privacy.
- Conflicts among residents due to different habits or behaviors.
- High housing costs or sometimes lack of services.
- Limited space or furniture in some dormitories.

7. Recommendations to Improve On-Campus Housing Policy

- Periodically update the housing infrastructure.
- Provide psychological and social support programs for resident students.
- Enhance communication mechanisms between housing administration and students.
- Organize awareness workshops to promote positive behavior.
- Consider multiple housing options to suit different needs and circumstances.

Conclusion

The on-campus housing policy is a key pillar to support students and provide an integrated educational environment. Through proper organization and adherence to regulations, the policy can maximize benefits serving both university goals and student needs.
